Dashain 2026 Watchlist: Five Nepali Movies Now on YouTube

Five Nepali movies released on YouTube around Dashain 2026: Mahabhoj, Jerry on Top, Mohar, Pardeshi 2 and Jante Bakhro, with official full-movie video embeds.

By Nepal Digest - October 26, 2026 - Nepal

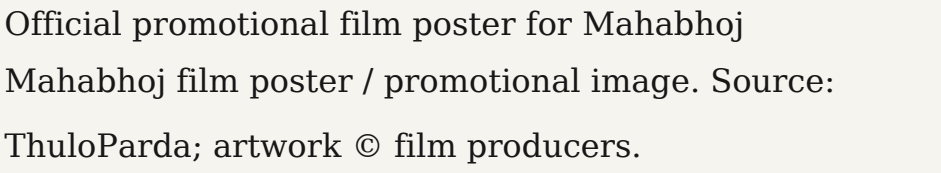

Five Nepali films, from socially engaged dramas to a village comedy, are now available to watch on YouTube following the Dashain 2026 release window.

Not everyone could get to the cinema during the festive season. For Nepalis at home and abroad, official YouTube uploads offer a chance to catch up on films that were previously shown in theatres, without searching through unofficial copies.

These five releases cover the cooperative savings crisis, a Himalayan adventure, the Deuki tradition, migration and the complications of village marriage. Here is a spoiler-light guide, with the full films embedded below each entry.

1. Mahabhoj

Director: Dinesh Raut

Cast: Dayahang Rai, Aryan Sigdel, Khagendra Lamichhane, Anjana Baraili and Malika Mahat

Mahabhoj puts Nepal’s cooperative savings crisis at the centre of a social drama. In a community where a cooperative is supposed to safeguard hard-earned money, political ambition and financial wrongdoing gradually undermine public trust.

The film examines the consequences for ordinary depositors, families and employees caught between local power and institutional collapse. Its subject resonates beyond the screen because cooperative failures have become a defining economic anxiety for many Nepalis.

Best for viewers who prefer topical dramas about money, accountability and the human cost of corruption.

2. Jerry on Top

Director: Suyog Gurung

Cast: Anmol KC, Jassita Gurung, Aanchal Sharma, Bhuwan KC and Kedar Ghimire

Jerry on Top takes its characters into the Himalayas, using an Everest expedition to explore rivalry, pride and the desire for recognition. Jerry, a privileged young man, is determined to prove that he can achieve something his successful father could not.

As the challenge becomes far more serious than he imagined, the film combines mountain adventure with personal relationships and questions about what makes an achievement meaningful. Its landscape and high-altitude premise distinguish it from a conventional romantic drama.

Best for viewers looking for adventure, romance and a story of ambition against the backdrop of Everest.

3. Mohar

Director: Om Prateek

Cast: Paul Shah, Niti Shah, Benisha Hamal, Arjun Jung Shahi and Laxmi Giri

Set in western Nepal, Mohar draws on the Deuki tradition, a historical practice in which girls were dedicated to temples. The film explores how superstition, entrenched social hierarchies and family authority can restrict women's choices.

The story follows a rural community shaped by coercive power, with romance and conflict unfolding in the shadow of inherited customs. Its most compelling subject is the tension between tradition and individual freedom.

Best for viewers interested in social issues, rural Nepal and stories about gender and power.

4. Pardeshi 2

Director: Narayan Rayamajhi

Migration is central to the lives of countless Nepali families, and Pardeshi 2 puts the emotional burden of leaving home in the foreground. A young man departs for higher education in the United States, carrying his family's aspirations along with his own.

Life overseas brings competing demands: study, work, financial pressure, distance and the strain of maintaining relationships across borders. Featuring singer Prakash Saput in his debut leading film role, the drama is especially relevant to students and diaspora families.

Best for viewers drawn to family stories about migration, belonging and the price of opportunity.

5. Jante Bakhro

Director: Simosh Sunuwar

Cast: Saugat Malla, Aasif Shah, Garima Sharma and Rama Thapaliya

Jante Bakhro offers a lighter alternative: a village-set romantic comedy built around marriage expectations and misunderstandings. Kamal is a selective bachelor in search of a bride, but his plans become complicated when the woman he likes already has a romantic attachment.

The premise draws humour from matchmaking, family pressure, village gossip and the tradition of feeding the wedding party. For Nepalis living abroad, the rural setting and wedding customs may also carry a welcome sense of familiarity.

Best for viewers who want humour, traditional village life and a relaxed family movie night.

Why official YouTube releases matter to Nepalis abroad

Nepali-language films do not always receive a cinema release in every city where Nepali communities live. Online releases extend their reach to students, migrant workers and families who may not have a Nepali cinema nearby.

The films also show the range of contemporary Nepali storytelling. Mahabhoj addresses financial vulnerability and politics. Jerry on Top looks at the pursuit of recognition. Mohar turns to power and social customs. Pardeshi 2 reflects the realities of migration, and Jante Bakhro offers an accessible rural comedy.

A note for viewers: These embeds point to the rights holders’ or official distribution channels, rather than reproducing the films. Playback and embedding availability can vary by country and may change at the discretion of YouTube or the channel owner.
